UK'S CAMERON RELEASES TAX RECORDS TO CALM PANAMA PAPERS STORM

British Prime Minister David Cameron took the unusual step on Sunday of publishing his tax records to try to end days of questions about his personal wealth raised by the mention of his late father's offshore fund in the Panama Papers. Cameron's initial reluctance to admit that he had benefited from the fund caused a furor, compounding his problems when he faces a huge political fight to persuade Britons to vote to stay in the European Union in a June 23 referendum. The EU issue has split his Conservative Party, while the government has also been going through a tough patch over a senior minister's resignation. REUTERS

US AIRMAN IN SHOOTING AT TEXAS AIR BASE WAS A FORMER FBI AGENT

A U.S. airman who apparently shot and killed his commanding officer at Lackland Air Force Base in Texas and then turned the gun on himself was a former Federal Bureau of Investigation agent, the FBI said on Sunday. Air Force Technical Sgt. Steven D. Bellino was an FBI agent for less than two years when he resigned in May 2013, an agency spokesman said. Bellino and Lt. Colonel William A. Schroeder were found dead at 8:50 a.m. on Friday inside an office at the base in San Antonio. Schroeder was Bellino's commanding officer, military officials said in a statement. The shootings appeared to have been a murder-suicide. A Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, told CNN that the airman shot his commander. REUTERS

FORMER SAINTS PLAYER WILL SMITH SHOT DEAD, SUSPECT CHARGED

Will Smith was killed and his wife injured by a gunman who shot the retired football player several times after ramming into his car in New Orleans, police and a local media report said on Sunday. Alleged shooter Cardell Hayes, 30, was arrested and charged with second-degree murder, the New Orleans Police Department said in a tweet. Police said they were investigating the killing as a possible case of road rage. Smith, 34, a retired defensive end with the NFL's New Orleans Saints, was traveling in a Mercedes in the city's Lower Garden District when his car was rear-ended by a Hummer. Smith exchanged words with the driver of the Hummer, who took out a handgun and shot him several times, New Orleans Police Department spokesman Juan Barnes said in a statement. REUTERS

BOLARIS' WEATHER WATCH: SNOW DONE, FUNK AHEAD

Well wasn't that a nice springlike weekend ... Not!

A few places picked up to a half foot of snow this past weekend in parts of the Northern Mid-Atlantic and Northeast. Freezing temperatures had you scrambling for the winter gear once again, and some of our crops and plants were damaged, from record cold.

The good news is "no more snow, the winter of 2015-16 is over," however a big warmup is not in sight, at least not from this weather guy. Now, if you're looking at your local seven-day outlook it looks pretty good with sunshine basically from Wednesday through this upcoming weekend.

Unfortunately I don't see it this way as an omega block is setting up, and if you're on the wrong side of an omega block the weather will turn out funky and unsettled with showers, drizzle and cool temperatures.

An omega block is a huge upper level high-pressure ridge with two upper level low-pressure systems on each side of it. It looks like an upside-down horseshoe similar to the Greek alphabet character omega.

If you're in the middle of this high pressure ridge, the weather will turn out very nice with abundant sunshine, however if you're on the low pressure side of it, the weather turns unsettled for an extended period of time as the system is locked in "blocked."

The Northeast is prone to annoying omega blocks around this time of year and computer models are usually slow to pick this up. My advice to all my Metro peeps, especially all coastal residents, is to keep the umbrella nearby — light jackets, sweaters and the poncho will be in vogue this week, with the worst of it for your upcoming weekend. Smile, Memorial Day weekend is not that far away!

The protesters who got the former president red-faced and yelling at them for criticizing a 1994 crime bill say they believe Bill Clinton revealed "hate" for the black community.

SAM NEWHOUSE

Maybe Bill Clinton forgot how Philly people can be.

But with protesters in his face as he campaigned for his wife last Thursday at a recreational center in Mt. Airy, the former president nearly blew up defending his 1994 crime bill.

As Hillary Clinton fights to maintain her lead for the presidential nomination over Bernie Sanders, video showing her speak in support of the bill about "super-predators" — hypothetical, deranged young criminals imagined by social scientists to be on the rise in the early '90s — has been charged with using coded language regarding minorities in her push for the law.

Two Philly activists with the local Coalition for R.E.A.L. (Racial, Economic and Legal) Justice, went to the Clinton event last week to silently hold signs challenging the former president's crime bill, they said.

Instead, they got into a heated debate with the president, who claimed his bill yielded a 46-year low in gun violence.

He went on to claim, his voice rising, "I don't know how you would characterize the gang leaders who got 13-year-old kids hopped up on crack and sent them out onto the streets to murder other African-American children. Maybe you thought they were good citizens, she didn't. ... You are defending the people who killed the lives you say matter," Clinton said, his voice growing hoarse.

"That was appalling to me," said Rufus Farmer, one of the protesters. "That is, of course, inaccurate. We do not support murderers. ... We've heard this before. When we say you've hurt the black community, they say black-on-black on crime is the cause."

Erica Mines, the other protester, said she is still "processing" the whole situation.

"He revealed himself as a person who thinks black people are criminals and we deserve to be locked up and thrown away," Mines said. "It was very, very hateful. It was very, very telling of his personal thoughts when it comes to the black community. I'm still appalled by it."

Farmer and Mines both said they started out in silent protest, but that as Hillary supporters told them to put down their signs and argued with them, the squabble got the attention of Clinton from the podium, who began passionately defending the 1994 legislation that included a 10-year assault weapons ban and tougher drug crime sentencing guidelines.

"He wants to beat around the bush when it comes to the real devastation the crime bill had in the black community. ... Let's deal with the harsh realities of what mass incarceration, what poverty looks like, what an unjust policing and criminal/prison system still looks like this today," Mines said. "It's not to say he created mass incarceration, it was already a problem, but he definitely added to it."

Clinton said a day later that he "almost wanted to apologize" for the spat and regretted he did not engage in a conversation with the protesters.

Armed thieves hit two convenience stores in 20 minutes

Two convenience stores in Northeast Philly's 15th District were stuck up within 20 minutes of each other by a trio of armed robbers early Sunday, police said.

Police said Sunday they believe the two robberies, of two 7-Elevens, one in Holmesburg and one in Bridesburg, are linked.

Both robberies involved three armed suspects.

The first incident was a 7-Eleven on Frankford Avenue near Rhawn Street.

A police report states a store clerk was pistol-whipped and punched repeatedly after three men entered the store around 1:25 a.m.

One suspect jumped over the counter, said, "Give me the money" and then "struck [the clerk] over the head several times with the gun knocking him to the ground," according to the police report. Another suspect then allegedly punched the clerk in the head.

The trio got the victim back up and made him open the register, then took $150 in cash and an unknown quantity of cigarettes and fled.

One suspect was described as a black male, 5 foot 6, wearing a black hooded jacket and gloves, and the other two are described as wearing blue or black jackets.

The second incident took place at 1:45 a.m. at a 7-Eleven about 4 miles south near Bridge and Thompson streets.

Again, one armed suspect jumped over the counter and ordered the cashier to open the register. The suspects took $300 in cash, several boxes of Newport cigarettes and the cashier's wallet, threw the items in a black trash bag and fled, according to police.

A witness identified the suspects' vehicle as a red or maroon car, possibly a Honda, with a loud muffler, heading north to Interstate 95.

The suspects in the second robbery are described as three black males wearing ski masks, black hooded sweatshirts and gloves, and armed with a black handgun. One suspect is described as 6 feet tall, and the other two are described as being 5 foot 5 to 5 foot 6.

Anyone with any info about either robbery can call police at 215-686-TIPS or text a tip to PPD TIP (773847). SAM NEWHOUSE

Bensalem home gets unwanted redecoration in hit-and-run

A Bensalem family was unhurt after a driver plowed into their home just after 5 a.m. Sunday. The car crashed into the house on the 2200 block of Monroe Avenue after it hit a nearby grassy embankment and went airborne. The driver reportedly got out of the car, told a resident to call 911 then fled. CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Cop's off-duty slay of suspect under review

An off-duty Philly SWAT officer shot dead a man who was committing a robbery over the weekend, police said.

The officer was on the 5700 block of Park Avenue around 2:20 p.m. when he saw a suspect with a handgun robbing an elderly citizen, according to police.

The police report stated that the officer identified himself as a police officer and ordered the suspect to drop the weapon. When the suspect pointed the gun at the officer instead, the officer fired, missing the suspect, who fled on foot, police said.

During the pursuit the suspect and officer exchanged more fire. The suspect collapsed at Broad Street and Chew Avenue and was pronounced dead at 3:06 p.m., police said.

"Homicide and Internal Affairs are investigating the incident. The officer will be placed on desk duty pending the outcome of the investigation," a police report stated. SAM NEWHOUSE

BRIEF

Ukrainian PM Yatseniuk resigns, paving way for new government

Ukrainian Prime Minister Arseny Yatseniuk tendered his resignation on Sunday, paving the way for Western-backed coalition parties to nominate an ally of President Petro Poroshenko to try to form a more stable government.

Yatseniuk survived a no-confidence motion in February, but political infighting and graft scandals have fractured the ruling coalition and further delayed the disbursement of aid under a $17.5 billion International Monetary Fund bailout program.

The self-described "kamikaze" prime minister came to office in 2014 determined to pass stringent economic reforms, but his public support has slumped into the low single digits, partly on the perception that his government has not done enough to hold oligarchs to account.

His departure removes an obstacle to the formation of a new government, which must try to push delayed reform bills through parliament against the opposition of populist former coalition partners who have vowed to oppose austerity measures required under the IMF program.

"I have taken the decision to resign as prime minister of Ukraine. On Tuesday, April 12, my request will be submitted to the parliament," Yatseniuk said in a televised address.

"The political crisis in the country was created artificially. The desire to change one person blinded politicians and paralyzed their political will for real change," he said.

Poroshenko's BPP faction and Yatseniuk's People's Front party had been expected to announce a reboot of their ruling coalition next week.

US banks' dismal first quarter may be trouble for 2016

Goldman Sachs is expected to have the worst quarter in 10 years. GETTY IMAGES

It is only April, but some on Wall Street are already predicting a rotten 2016 for U.S. banks.

Analysts say it has been the worst start to the year since the financial crisis in 2007-08 and expect poor first-quarter results when reporting begins this week.

Concerns about economic growth in China, the impact of persistently low oil prices on the energy sector, and near-zero interest rates are weighing on capital markets activity as well as loan growth.

Analysts forecast a 20 percent decline on average in earnings from the six biggest U.S. banks, according to Thomson Reuters/IBES data. Some banks, including Goldman Sachs Group, are expected to report the worst results in over 10 years.

This spells trouble for the financial sector more broadly, since banks typically generate at least a third of their annual revenue during the first three months of the year.

"What's concerning people is they're saying, 'Is this going to spill over into other quarters?'"

Goldman's lead banking analyst Richard Ramsden said in an interview. "If you do have a significant decline in revenues, there is a limit to how much you can cut costs to keep things in equilibrium."

Investors will get some insight on Wednesday, when earnings season kicks off with JPMorgan Chase, the country's largest bank. That will be followed by Bank of America and Wells Fargo on Thursday, Citigroup on Friday, and Morgan Stanley and Goldman Sachs Group on Monday and Tuesday, respectively, in the following week.

Banks have been struggling to generate more revenue for years, while adapting to a panoply of new regulations that have raised the cost of doing business substantially.

The biggest challenge has been fixed-income trading, where heavy capital requirements, new derivatives rules, and restrictions on proprietary trading have made it less profitable, leading most banks to simply shrink the business.

Indian temple blaze

Thousands of devotees had packed into the Puttingal Devi temple when a fireworks display for the local Hindu new year sparked deadly explosions.

A fire and explosions during a fireworks display to mark the start of the local Hindu new year killed 100 people and injured more than 380 at a temple in the city of Kollam India's southern Kerala state on Sunday.

The blaze started when a cracker fell onto a shed where the fireworks were stored, sparking a string of powerful explosions that blew the roof of the administrative block of the temple and caused another building to collapse, residents said.

"There were body parts on the floor and on the roof there was an arm," Anita Prakash, a resident said. "In the past, there's been fireworks but not on this scale."

Kerala is studded with temples managed by rich and powerful trusts that often flout local regulations. Each year temples hold fireworks displays, often competing to stage the most spectacular ones, with judges who decide the winners.

Kollam district magistrate A. Shainamol said people living in the area near the temple had complained about the danger of these fireworks in the past.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi flew to Kollam with a team of doctors to help state authorities cope with the large number of injured, moving swiftly to head off criticism of a lack of public safety.

"The fire at the temple in Kollam is heart-rending and shocking beyond words," he said in a Twitter post. "My thoughts are with families of the deceased and prayers with the injured."

Modi has faced public criticism in the past for failing to respond

RACE FOR THE WHITE HOUSE

THE BATTLE AT HOME

Trivia question: What city can lay claim to more than half of the remaining presidential contenders? Yep, New York. And with the Empire State's primary looming, you can expect to see the candidates trudging up and down Broadway like actors looking for auditions. That leads my three things to watch this week in politics.

1. HOME COURT ADVANTAGE: Bernie Sanders was born in New York. Hillary Clinton has adopted it as her home. Either way, both of the Democratic contenders will be hollering up their homies for what promises to be a ripping debate on CNN Thursday night. All that friendly banter of the early days? Fuggedaboutit. Expect tough talk and spiked spinning afterward. Donald Trump will probably be tearing out his remaining hair because he can't get into the fight with them. Oh wait, it's Trump. He'll find a way. Meanwhile, Ted Cruz — find any New York values you like yet?

2. SLOW AND GRUDGING: The Department of Justice has finally and reluctantly released documents related to the federal sting-turned-fiasco called Fast and Furious. That was the gun-running operation that was supposed to ferret out big drug dealers in Mexico but ended up arming some instead. One weapon was even found in the hideout of El Chapo. Congress-sional Republicans have been screaming for the papers for years, but it took a court order to make it happen and even then the Obama administration waited until the deadline. Not sure the GOP can get any attention on the matter amid all the campaign noise, but they'll try this week anyway.

3. GETTING AWAY FROM IT ALL: If everything goes as planned, Bernie Sanders will be hanging out with His Holiness in Rome just days before the New York vote. Maybe. Sanders proudly announced he'd been invited to the Pontifical Academy of Social Sciences, and that's happening on Friday. But then came some angry words from folks suggesting he kind of invited himself, and it's not clear if he'll see the pope, and ... heaven knows how it will turn out. Literally.

Brussels bombers had planned to attack France again: Prosecutors

The militant cell behind bombings in Brussels had been plotting to hit France again after carrying out the Paris attacks in November, but was forced to strike closer to home as police closed in, Belgian prosecutors said on Sunday.

Investigations into the Islamic State attacks in Paris, which killed 130 people, showed that many of the perpetrators lived in Belgium, including surviving suspects who managed to evade police for more than four months.

Prime suspect Salah Abdeslam was arrested on March 18 in the Belgian capital. Four days later, suicide bombers killed 32 people in Brussels airport and a rush-hour metro train.

"Numerous elements in the investigation have shown that the terrorist group initially had the intention to strike in France again," Belgium's federal prosecutor said in a statement.

"Surprised by the speed of progress in the investigation, they took the decision to strike in Brussels."

Belgian intelligence and security forces had been criticized abroad for not doing more to dismantle the militant cell, because of its links to the Paris attacks.

As of Friday, all publicly identified suspects were either in detention or dead, but Belgium remains on its second highest threat level, and Prime Minister Charles Michel said his government would remain alert.

His comments were echoed by French Prime Minister Manuel Valls, who said France would not be lowering its guard.

"This is a further sign of the very serious threat facing Europe as a whole and of course France in particular," Valls told a news conference in Algiers. REUTERS

Leonardo DiCaprio officially sweeps awards season

Sure, finally winning an Oscar was a big deal for Leonardo DiCaprio, but this icing on the cake must feel pretty great, too. DiCaprio officially locked up the awards racket for his work in "The Revenant" this weekend by nabbing the MTV Movie Award for Best Male Performance, beating out Chris Pratt, Matt Damon, Michael B. Jordan, Will Smith and "Deadpool" star Ryan Reynolds. Ah, yes. The coveted golden popcorn. Truly he is the undisputed Best Actor for this year. Oddly enough, DiCaprio didn't show up in person to accept his latest honor. In related news, can you imagine what his mantle looks like at this point?

Jim Carrey is a really good tipper

Some restaurant gigs are better than others. Case in point: Whoever was lucky enough to wait on Jim Carrey's party at the Chester, a restaurant in the Gansevoort Hotel, recently. The "Dumb and Dumber" star really, really enjoyed his meal because, according to Page Six, despite the bill only coming to $151, he left a $225 tip. Either he was feeling really generous, or he's just terrible at math. A source says "Everyone seemed to be in a good mood" because obviously, but how big could this group have been if the bill at a Meatpacking District restaurant was $151?

Blac Chyna and Rob Kardashian make with the baby-making

If Rob Kardashian's whirlwind romance and engagement to Blac Chyna seems a bit too speedy for your tastes, then you better hold on tighter. Because according to Radar Online's sources, the new couple is also looking to get pregnant. Because why not! "Blac has come off the pill and Rob's not using protection," an egregiously oversharing source says. "They're openly telling friends they want to get pregnant and she knows he's going to make a great dad."

Oh, delightful. And to hear another source tell it, that effort may already be paying off — much to Kris Jenner's chagrin. "Blac has been desperately trying to get pregnant and the family fears she already might be," the second source says. "They're scared that he proposed so quickly because he felt pressured because she could be pregnant."

Feud between Queen and Sacha Baron Cohen not going away

So remember when Sacha Baron Cohen was going to star as Freddie Mercury in a biopic about the late Queen singer but he couldn't see eye to eye with the band on how to do the movie? Well, apparently neither side will shut up about it. Last month Cohen dished to Howard Stern about how the band wanted a cleaner, PG-13 movie, while he wanted something darker. Now Queen guitarist Brian May is striking back, telling the Guardian that's not exactly why things didn't work out. "Sacha became an arse," he said. "We had some nice times with Sacha kicking around ideas, but he went off and told untruths about what happened." OK then! Oh, and May says the film is still happening, but with Ben Whishaw in the role. "He's fabulous," May says. "A real actor." Oh, burn.

LAURIE DAVIS

Single and Swiping

Laurie Davis is the founder of eFlirt, an online dating concierge service, and the best-selling author of "Love @ First Click: The Ultimate Guide to Online Dating."

If you spend enough time swiping, some great matches will pop up on your screen. But meeting IRL for a date isn't always easy. Maybe your messages lose momentum or the other person flakes. It happens to a lot of my clients.

One recently told me he had 14 conversations going on an app, but only four resulted in real dates. And that's the norm — lots of messages, but not nearly as many dates offline.

New apps that will get you an offline date

Is the app you're using keeping you from going on more dates? iStock

New apps are trying to fix this ratio by flipping how you flirt: Make plans first, message later. You can opt out of the date if you communicate and don't click, but having plans to start (hopefully) means fewer missed connections.

You'll find this style of connecting on the app Dine, where you are shown a date spot and a match who'd like to meet there. If you like the person, send him or her a request for a date. Once accepted, you can chat and plan the date.

On the app Fortu, the functionality is similar but the focus is more on activity dates. You can browse your matches by category, such as culture and entertainment. A day and time is listed for each date, too. It's a bonus for busy singles who want to slip dating into their schedules, since you can filter by when you're free.

Since getting offline is such an issue for singles, I expect we'll see more apps like this soon. But no matter which app is at your fingertips, keep in mind that when date planning comes first, the ideas you post matter most.

Consider how you'll connect with someone in that environment before you agree to meet. For example, tickets to a show are a fun idea, but it may not give you the chance to really get to know each other. And all restaurants are not created equal — the ambiance often sets the tone.

Culture crossroads

A new exhibit explores the influence of Asia on early American art.

SHAUN BRADY
@MetroPhilly

Globalism may be a modern buzzword, but the idea came into being as soon as one far-flung corner of the world could sell its goods to another.

In the exhibition "Made in the Americas: The New World Discovers Asia," Winterthur Museum, Garden & Library explores the influence of Asian culture on hundreds of years of art, textiles and furniture in North, Central and South America.

"Artists from across the hemisphere created fascinating hybrid objects, made in the Americas but imagining Asia," says curator Dennis Carr of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, which premiered the exhibition last year.

"This variety of new objects was only possible here. I hope that this show is a spark plug for new ways of thinking about art in the Americas."

The results of this first meeting of New and Old Worlds is often dazzling.

Visitors to the exhibition are greeted by a stunning, glimmering lacquerware chest from Japan inlaid with mother-of-pearl.

That initial gleam is echoed throughout the show, in golden-hued folding screens and a remarkable mosaic portrait of St. Michael slaying the devil, made up entirely of the feathers of tropical birds, its colors still brilliant after more than 400 years.

These unique items came about after new trade routes opened across the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans beginning in the 16th century. New techniques, approaches, culture and ideas suddenly flooded the marketplace.

"It was the first moment when the four major parts of the world — Europe, Africa, Asia and the Americas — were interconnected through trade," Carr explains. "The Americas became a major hub and were flooded with luxury goods from Asia."

pan, cotton from India and ivories from Goa and the Philippines created new possibilities for artists and artisans from Mexico City to Boston.

"Made in the Americas" is full of new discoveries that offer a picture of early cultural cross-pollination. "These kinds of objects have fallen through the cracks of art history," Carr says. "They don't tell the direct Old World-to-New World story; they tell a different, more complicated and nuanced one."

World's thinnest laptop unveiled

Get all the details here, ahead of the April 25 release date.

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

Until now, Apple's MacBook Air has held the title of thinnest and lightest laptop, but all that just changed with the unveiling of the HP Spectre. It's just 13.3 inches diagonally across and 2.45 pounds, though 17.3-inch and 15.6-inch options are also available.

"The HP Spectre is the thinnest notebook in the world, and unlike the majority of other superthin PCs on the market, this laptop doesn't compromise power or features," says Kevin Frost, vice president and general manager, consumer personal systems, HP Inc. in a press release.

The HP Spectre will retail for $1,250. PROVIDED

The 13.3-inch Spectre can be preordered for $1,1250 at HP.com and BBY.com and will retail for $1,250 in Best Buy stores starting May 22. The 17.3 inch Spectre will retail for $1,030 and the 15.6-inch will sell for $680.

Other features include a nine-hour battery life, full HD IPS display, 512 GB of storage, 8 GB of memory, SP Audio Boost technology speakers by Bang & Olufsen and USB connectors.

In addition to the standard silver, HP will release limited editions made with 18K gold and diamonds. The limited-edition notebooks were designed by Tord Boontje, whose work has been featured in the MoMa and Smithsonian, and Jess Hannah, a fine jewelry designer based in Los Angeles.

Can you have a great career?

Expert tips on finding a job you'll love long-term.

ALIZAH SALARIO
@Alirosa
alizabeth.salarioro@metro.us

It used to be that with hard work and maybe a little luck, you could get a decent job, stay with the same company for decades and retire comfortably.

That's no longer the case — and it hasn't been for awhile, argues University of Waterloo economics professor Larry Smith in his book, "No Fears, No Excuses: What you Need to do to Have a Great Career."

Smith suggests our approach to finding a lasting career hasn't kept pace with the job market, and many people are held back by fear and excuses. We talked to him about how to have a great career (and not merely a good one).

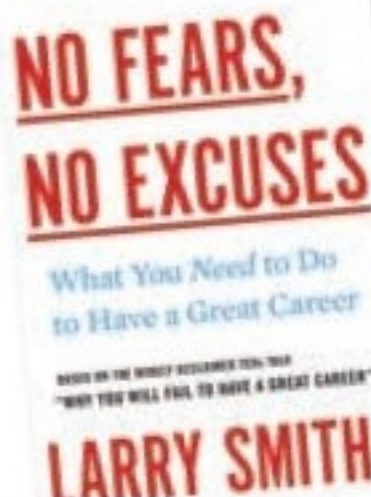

In your book you say there are no more safe jobs. Why?

For a lot of people, the midrange was attainable, and available and offered reasonable opportunities. In proportion, the number of bad jobs is rising, and the number of good jobs is also rising, but the middle of that is shrinking. That means if you're shooting for the midrange, you're shooting for a range of shrinking opportunities.

What do you mean by "bad" jobs?

So many jobs have gone from good to the dreadful scale, which, of course, is because of the expansion of workload. So a lot of jobs that still were good jobs 15 years ago are now pressure-cooker jobs, for which a work-life balance is a delusion.

jobs & education

HOW TO GET AHEAD

There is a lot of frustration around finding a good job.

It's part of the American dream that's no longer guaranteed.

I want people to recognize: [The American Dream] is still alive. But you have to recognize that the midground was the quote "easy" American dream. A great career is not about status prestige or huge amounts of money. It's not a one-on-one mapping where the more money you make, the greater your career.

So how do you know if you're on the right path or spinning your wheels?

It's not a question of just trying the best you can and giving it a shot. You now have to figure out what your distinction is. One of the reasons you need to have a passionate interest in your work is that it does contribute to one's well-being. Unless you love what you're doing, you can't innovate it. If you can't call up new ideas, then truly you're not going to have a great career. The book makes very clear you need to have a passionate interest in what you're doing, but that's absolutely not enough.

So we need passion-plus? The other elements are that you enjoy your work, that your talent is being taken to its limit, that you feel like you're being stretched and that you're growing because of your capability, you feel like you've impacted the world around you and that you care about that impact.

The other element that's so important is a plan for how you're going to develop that creative skill. It has to be a multiyear plan, and I know that's not sexy, but great careers aren't built overnight. But the young person should start now, the minute they graduate.

5 Things Flyers must do to upset Capitals when NHL Playoffs start

The Flyers will start their postseason in the nation's capital later this week.

ERIC GOLDSTEIN
@EricEsponda
sports@metro.us

The Flyers remarkably completed a thrilling dash to qualify for the Stanley Cup Playoffs with Saturday's clinching 3-1 victory over the Penguins. Now it's time for them to turn their attention to the top-seeded Capitals, who are their opponent in the first round.

Although the Capitals won the President's Trophy by ending the season with the most points in the NHL, the two teams split the regular-season series, 2-2, with each team sweeping on their home ice. Plus, three of the four games were decided by one goal, including two that went past regulation. In what should be an entertaining matchup, here are five keys to the series for the Flyers.

1 Win Game 1

The Capitals recent playoff history is littered with disappointing early exits, which will no doubt be on their minds this week. The Flyers can compound their anxiety with a win in D.C. in the opener and immediately steal home ice advantage and momentum.

2 Stay out of the penalty box

Led by superstar Alex Ovechkin's league-leading 19 power-play goals, the Capitals are deadly on the man-advantage. They finished the season ranked fourth in the league and first in the Eastern Conference.

The Flyers have exceeded almost everyone's expectations already. GETTY IMAGES

3 Find their power play mojo

Meanwhile, the Flyers

have had a love-hate relationship with the power play all season. They ended the year ranked 18th in the league and went 0-for-13 on the power play to finish the year. Of all the teams that qualified for the playoffs, only the Lightning and Panthers had a worse ranking.

4 The goalie matchup

The Capitals are set with Brayden Holtby in net, whereas the Flyers are going to ride Steve Mason. A sure-bet Vezina Trophy candidate, Holtby tied Martin Brodeur's single-season NHL wins record with 48 this year to go along with a 2.20 goals against average and .922 save percentage.

Mason, who started 17 of the final 18 games of the year and was often the team's best player on the ice, went 23-19-10 with a 2.51 GAA and .918 save percentage. The team is banking on Mason to carry the momentum from the end of the season into the playoffs and resemble the net-minder who nearly outplayed Henrik Lundqvist in the first round of the playoffs in 2014.

5 Avoid emotional letdown

The Senators went an astounding 23-4-4 over their final 31 games to qualify for the playoffs in the second-to-last game of the regular season last year. However, they ran out of gas during a first-round exit.

The Flyers went 13-5-3 during a grueling stretch where every game felt like a playoff game to reach the playoffs in their second-to-last game of the season. They hope to have more than enough left in the tank mentally and physically against the Capitals.

NFL mock draft | by Luke Miller

No. 1

Titans
Laremy Tunsil, T

When you invest the second overall pick in a quarterback like the Titans did last season, the next step is investing the first overall pick in a tackle to protect Marcus Mariota. Tunsil is the best one available and the first player off the board.

No. 4

Cowboys
Carson Wentz, QB

This pick is the toughest to call, and will set the tone for the rest of the first round. Wentz can sit behind Romo for a time. It's hard for the Cowboys to pass up defensive talent at this spot, but it might be equally hard for them to predict the next time they'll have a shot at a QB this high in the draft.

No. 6

Ravens
Joey Bosa, DE

The Ravens might want to look at offensive tackle with this pick, but Ronnie Stanley isn't the equal of Bosa as a prospect. The Ravens have always been about getting it done on defense, and Terrell Suggs isn't getting any younger. Bosa will keep their pass rush alive for years to come.

No. 8

Eagles
Ronnie Stanley, T

It will be tempting to look at the draft to fix what Byron Maxwell and DeMarco Murray didn't and take Vernon Hargreaves or Ezekiel Elliot here. Stanley gives the Eagles line depth they definitely need at the moment, and the starting tackle they'll need when Jason Peters can't get on the field.

No. 10

Giants
Jack Conklin, T

The Giants have looked to the offensive line constantly in recent drafts and, unfortunately, don't yet have a reason to stop. Some help at the wide receiver position, now absent Reuben Randle and still awaiting Victor Cruz, might be needed, but this is a little too high.

No. 2

Browns
Jared Goff, QB

The Browns signed Robert Griffin III, but their recent track record redeeming quarterbacks can't leave them feeling comfortable about their chances. Goff is the quarterback readiest to step in and play, and that's what the Browns need — and have needed for quite a while — somebody to do.

No. 3

Chargers
Jalen Ramsey, CB

The Chargers could go in any number of directions on defense with this pick: Myles Jack and DeForest Buckner in particular are tempting. But Ramsey is a playmaker unlike any other available at defensive back in this draft, and the rare safety prospect worthy of a top 10 selection.

No. 5

Jaguars
Myles Jack, LB

Investing in offense in the draft has paid huge dividends for Jacksonville, and now it's time for them to start matching that with the defense until they aren't picking inside the top five anymore. Jack is as explosive a defensive talent as there is in this class — as long as his knee is recovered.

No. 7

49ers
DeForest Buckner, DE

Call it a coincidence. No, Chip Kelly isn't calling the shots in San Francisco, but Trent Baalke is. And last year Baalke picked Arik Armstead, a towering defensive lineman from Oregon. Make it a double.

No. 9

Bucs
Vernon Hargreaves, CB

His height might scare some teams away, but there's no replacing talent. The last time Tampa Bay was good it was all about their defense, with names like Ronde Barber and John Lynch in the secondary. Recreating those days sounds pretty good.

Aries Romance will enhance your life if you make an effort to enhance your sex appeal. A change in how you deal with money matters looks promising.

Taurus An aggressive but secretive move will increase your cash flow. Express your interest in someone who could teach you a thing or two. Socializing will give you a platform.

Gemini An emotional situation will force you to make a move. Don't hang around to see what happens. You are best off heading in the direction that most suits you.

Cancer Make the first move and then ask others to join in. A proposal will grab your interest, but find out what's expected of you before you jump in.

Leo A stubborn attitude will hold you back. Focus on self-improvement and tackling physical challenges that will encourage love, romance and a better personal life.

Virgo Slow down and evaluate a situation that is based on innuendoes and hearsay. Avoid getting involved in gossip or meddling in someone else's affairs; you'll regret it if you don't.

Libra You'll be drawn to people who can offer you something unique. Enjoy their input, but think things over before you make life changes that you could regret.

Scorpio Discuss your financial obligations. Take an unusual approach to details that involve money, your time or a contractual commitment in order to strengthen your reputation.

Sagittarius You'll be raring to get up and go, but first consider any risks involved. Someone will mislead you if you are too enthusiastic or gullible. Romance is featured.

Capricorn Being secretive about your personal life will help you avoid judgment from colleagues. Listen to what others have to say in order to improve your position.

Aquarius A commitment made to family and friends will bring you closer together. You will make progress if you initiate changes to the way you do your job or present your resume.

Pisces Your emotions will come between you and a rational decision. Listen carefully and make sure you understand what's expected of you before you agree to something. EUGENIA LAST
